

ARE YOU WATER WISE?

We focus on water efficiency year round, but join the State during May to celebrate Water Awareness Month. In our region, most household water use occurs outdoors so it's critical to be as efficient as possible with outdoor watering. It's an excellent time to check your irrigation systems, pools and spas and hose bibs to see if they are leaking and need repair or replacement.

Using water efficiently helps ensure residents and businesses have adequate water supplies, it also helps ensure we have water to fuel our economy and sustain our ecosystems. Please check out helpful tips on our website and YouTube channel and through our partners at Save Our Water and Be Water Smart.

2021 Water Supply Trending Down

The Sacramento region is experiencing a second dry year in a row, but water supplies in the Sacramento area will be adequate in 2021. One to two dry years does not create a drought emergency, but they can be cause for concern.

Like last year, precipitation in Northern California is below normal. We had decent rain and snowfall in December, but below normal conditions for January, February and March.

Water supply in Folsom Reservoir and other reservoirs around the state are below normal storage levels, but, at this time, we do not have a water shortage and are not asking you to take extraordinary conservation measures. If the coming winter is dry, we will re-evaluate potential actions then.
